Library of Congress Copyright Office To Register Colorized Motion Pictures

The Library of Congress Copyright Office announced its decision on June 19 to register for copyright protection certain colorized versions of black-and-white motion pictures.

A colorized motion picture will be granted copyright protection as a "derivative work" if that color version reveals a certain minimum amount of individual creative human authorship and is produced by existing computer-coloring technology. Registration will be denied to works when the authorship claimed consists of the addition of only a relatively small number of colors to an existing black-and-white motion picture or multiple-color versions of the same work.

Under a proposed regulation, for which the Library of Congress has invited public comment, the Copyright Office would also require the deposit of one black-and-white version and one colorized copy

When registration is warranted, the copyright will cover only the new material, the numerous selections of color that are added. The copyright status of the underlying black-and-white film is unaffected. When an underlying work is in the public domain, another party is free to use that work to make a different color version which may also be eligible for copyright protection.

The general standard for determining whether the color added to a black-and-white motion picture is sufficient to merit copyright protection is the same statutory standard that already applies to all derivative works. In determining whether a particular work satisfies this standard, the Copyright Office will apply the following criteria: (1) Numerous color selections must be made by human beings from an extensive color inventory. (2) The range and extent of colors added to the black-and-white work must represent more than a trivial variation. (3) The overall appearance of the motion picture must be modified; registration will not be made for the coloring of a few frames or the enhancement of color in a previously colored film. (4) Removal of color from a motion picture or other work will not justify registration. (5) The existing regulatory prohibition on copyright registration based on mere variations of color is confirmed.

Meeting of International Group Of Publishing Libraries

The Library of Congress was host to the third biennial meeting of the International Group of Publishing Libraries (IGPL), May 20-22. The 20 delegates to the meeting represented the British Library; the Bodleian Library, Oxford; Trinity College Library, Dublin; the National Library of Scotland; Edinburgh University Library; the Royal Library, Holland; the National Library of Canada; the University of Toronto Library; Harvard University Library; the American Antiquarian Society; the New York Public Library; the Pierpont Morgan Library; the Free Library of Philadelphia; the Huntington Library; and the Library of Congress.

Members of IGPL are united by a common interest in the task of issuing publications that describe or amplify the collections and work of their institutions. They are also concerned with the operation of shops that make these and related items available to visitors, and with issues of fund raising. The meeting included sessions on such topics as the interaction of the author, editor, and designer in "building a book"; selling scholarly books in the American market; producing facsimiles (The Book of Kells, and American "shape books"); library-wide marketing; the general principles of running a library shop; and a specific plan for a new shop at the National Library of Scotland.

The first meeting of the International Group of Publishing Libraries was held in London in 1983, the second in The Hague in 1985. The next meeting of the IGPL will be held in Edinburgh in May 1989.

The Library of Congress Information Bulletin is issued weekly by the Information Office of the Library of Congress and distributed free of charge to publicly supported libraries and research institutions, academic libraries, learned societies, and allied organizations in the United States.

Comparable institutions and organizations in other countries may arrange to receive the Bulletin on an exchange basis by applying in writing to the Library's Exchange and Gift Division. All other correspondence should be addressed to the LC Information Bulletin, Information Office, Library of Congress, Washington, DC 20540.

Center for the Book Trust Fund Is Launched

An endowment known as the Center for the Book Trust Fund has been established by a gift from an anonymous donor of more than $10,000 in stocks in publishing companies. In making the gift, the donor, a person long associated with book publishing and libraries, expressed the hope that others would contribute to the endowment, which will provide the Center for the Book with a predictable source of income. Early in 1987, John Wiley & Sons contributed an additional $3,000 to the fund, and the original donor has pledged an additional $10,000.

A partnership between the private sector and the Library of Congress, the Center for the Book in the Library of Congress was established by law in 1977. Its purpose is to stimulate public interest in books and reading and to encourage the study of how books and reading shape society. Private, tax-deductible contributions support the center's projects and publications and most of its operating costs. In the past year, more than 40 corporations and nearly 300 individuals have made donations. The new Center for the Book Trust Fund, however, will give the center its first assured source of continuing income. For further information, write John Y. Cole, Director, The Center for the Book, Library of Congress, Washington, DC 20540.

Information Is Sought on Allen Tate, Former Consultant in Poetry

Thomas A. Underwood of Harvard University is seeking information on Allen Tate, Consultant in Poetry at the Library of Congress, 1943-44, for a biography. Mr. Underwood is interested in letters, photographs, recollections, and interviewees. He is also interested in meeting Mr. Tate's former colleagues, as well as anyone who attended or helped to arrange Mr. Tate's address at the Library on March 26, 1974, for the centenary of Robert Frost's birth.

Mr. Underwood may be contacted at the Program in the History of American Civilization, Robinson Hall, Harvard University, Cambridge, MA 02138.

Luncheon Honors Organizing Committee Of Chinese Book Exhibition

Sharon J. Rogers (left), Ma Caxiong, and William J. Welsh.

A ten-day China Book Exhibition, "From Bones to Books: The Chinese Book Through History," the first of its kind in the United States, was held at the Gelman Library, George Washington University, April 20 to May 1. The exhibition was sponsored by the China Foreign Languages Publishing and Distribution Administration, Ministry of Culture, People's Republic of China; the Washington Center of the Asia Society; the China Institute in America; the U.S.–China People's Friendship Association; and at George Washington University, the Gelman Library, the Council on International Programs, the Asian Languages and Literature Department, and the Sino-Soviet Institute.

On display at the exhibition were more than 1,700 books, ranging from philosophy, human sciences, arts, science and technology, to medical sciences. There were also some 3,000-year-old tablets unearthed by Chinese archaeologists.

On April 22, William J. Welsh, The Deputy Librarian of Congress, hosted a luncheon at the Library in honor of the Delegation of the Organizing Committee. Guests included Ma Caxiong, deputy director, Foreign Languages Publishing and Distribution Administration, Ministry of Culture; Huang Youyi, deputy editor-in-chief, Foreign Languages Press; Chen Tin Sun, director, Cypress Book Company; and others accompanied by Chinese Embassy staff members. Other guests at the luncheon were: Sharon J. Rogers, university librarian, and William B. Keller, head, Special Collections, both of the Gelman Library; as well as representative staff members from related departments of the Library of Congress, including the Copyright Office, the Publishing Office, Research Services, the Asian Division, and the Descriptive Cataloging Division.

In his welcoming remarks, Mr. Welsh said that such exhibit activities would help to promote knowledge exchange and increase understanding and friendship between the people of China and the United States. The delegation felt that in organizing this exhibit, it would help to show the uniqueness and singularity of China's contribution to world civilization, and the richness of China's ancient cultural heritage, as well as developments in modern-day China.

Center for the Book Issues New Poster—"The Reader"

"The Reader," a 24- by 36-inch poster by New York artist Will Barnet, has been published by the Library of Congress. Sponsored by the Center for the Book, the poster was made possible by a grant to the center from the National Home Library Foundation of Washington, D.C. The grant commemorates "1987—The Year of the Reader."

The poster designed by John Michael is available at the Library's sales and information counter for $8.95. Mail orders should be addressed to Box A, Information Office, Library of Congress, Washington, DC 20540. (Add $2 to mail orders for postage and handling.)

Olive James to Be Library Director At San Francisco State University

Loan Division chief Olive James will leave the Library on July 17 to become director of the J. Paul Leonard Library at San Francisco State University. Founded in 1899, the university has an enrollment of more than 25,000 undergraduate and graduate students and a faculty of 1,700. Its library has a staff of 120 and a collection of more than two million items, including the KQED public television archives and the De Bellis Collection of Italian literature, art, and music.

During nearly seven years as Loan Division chief, Ms. James and her staff have introduced DIALOG and RLIN searching, OCLC and RLIN interlibrary loan capabilities, HIS electronic mail messaging with the House of Representatives, and telefacsimile transmission and electronic mail in the U.S. and abroad. During this period, the average turnaround time on interlibrary requests has been reduced to a few days, congressional borrower authorizations have been computerized, and a satellite station was established in the Madison building to serve Library employees. With the staff of the Automated Systems Office's Research Application-Circulation Control, the Loan Division introduced a time-shared circulation system (LS/2000) in 1983; and work continues on an in-house, online Circulation Control Facility, due for testing this fall.

Before coming to the Library of Congress, Ms. James served as head of reference at Stanford University Libraries and at Queens College, State University of New York. She is a member of the Board of Directors of the Reference and Adult Services Division of the American Library Association and has held committee responsibilities in the Association of College and Research Libraries, the Library Administration and Management Association, the Library Association of the City of New York, and the International Federation of Library Associations Collections and Services Section. During the 1985–86 academic year, she served as consultant for reference services at Yale University Library.

Director for general reference Elizabeth F. Stroup will function as acting chief of the Loan Division while a national search is conducted for a permanent successor.

David Kiefer Is Appointed Senior Specialist in Economic Policy

Donald W. Kiefer, specialist in public finance, Economics Division, Congressional Research Service (CRS), has been promoted to senior specialist in economic policy in the Office of the Associate Director for Research Coordination, effective March 30.

Dr. Kiefer received his bachelor's degree in business administration, cum laude, from Butler University. He earned both his master's and Ph.D. in economics from Purdue University, where he was selected as the outstanding graduate student in his class. As a graduate teaching assistant at Purdue, he received the outstanding teacher award for two years in a row.

After receiving his Ph.D., Dr. Keifer served as the executive director of the Indiana Commission on State Tax from 1972 to 1974. For the next two years he served as legislative assistant to former Senator Vance Hartke of Indiana.

Dr. Keifer joined the staff of the Congressional Research Service in April 1976 as an analyst in taxation in the Economics Division. He became head of the Tax Section that same year and served as section head until 1983, demonstrating both research and management skills of a high order. In November of 1980, his high level of expertise in public finance was recognized with his promotion to the position of specialist in public finance. Over the years, he has become a recognized expert in the field of public finance and many of his written reports have been cited or reproduced in books, magazines, and economics and law journals.

He has been an active member of the National Tax Association, serving on its Board of Directors for several years as well as on various committees. He is also a member of the American Economics Association and is an institute associate of the National Regulatory Research Institute.

Carol Elaine Smalls Receives 1987 UCLA Art Council Fellowship

Carol Elaine Smalls, cataloger revisor in the Audiovisual Section of the Copyright Cataloging Division, is the 1987 recipient of the University of California Los Angeles (UCLA) Art Council Fellowship in Art Librarianship. The fellowship is to provide an outstanding newcomer to the field with comprehensive experience and intensive involvement in art librarianship for six weeks.

STAFF NEWS

As the 1987 recipient, Ms. Smalls will have the opportunity to work with an art reference team, to deal with experienced librarians on all professional aspects of an art library, and to take part in events and activities on the southern California art scene. She will make working visits to the J. Paul Getty Center for the Arts and Humanities Library, the Huntington Library, the Brand Library in Glendale, and other local academic, museum, and public libraries with an art emphasis. Ms. Smalls will also choose an independent project for possible publication.

Ms. Smalls has been a cataloger in the Copyright Office for 11 years working in the Audiovisual, Visual Arts, and Serials Sections. She is an active member of the Copyright Office, Cataloging/Information and Reference Committee. She has received the Library of Congress Special Achievement Award for quality cataloging and assisting with training new catalogers in 1986 and the Library's Group Meritorious Service Award for a special cataloging project in 1983. She has a B.A., cum laude, in art history and an M.L.S., both from the University of Maryland.
